EMMANUEL PERROTIN, OWNER

What was your biggest show of the past year?

I have very fond memories of the 2011 exhibition of French artist Claude Rutault, "exposition-suicide." I love his work. I had wanted to collaborate with him for a long time, and he finally accepted. During this exhibition, some of the pieces called suicide paintings had to be destroyed if they were not sold. Fortunately, they were saved!

How has the gallery changed since its founding?

Founded in 1989, the gallery has launched 14 different sites over the past 24 years, with the aim of providing increasingly stimulating environments for its artists. In May 2012 the gallery inaugurated a 650-square-meter space in Hong Kong.

What are your plans for the next five years?

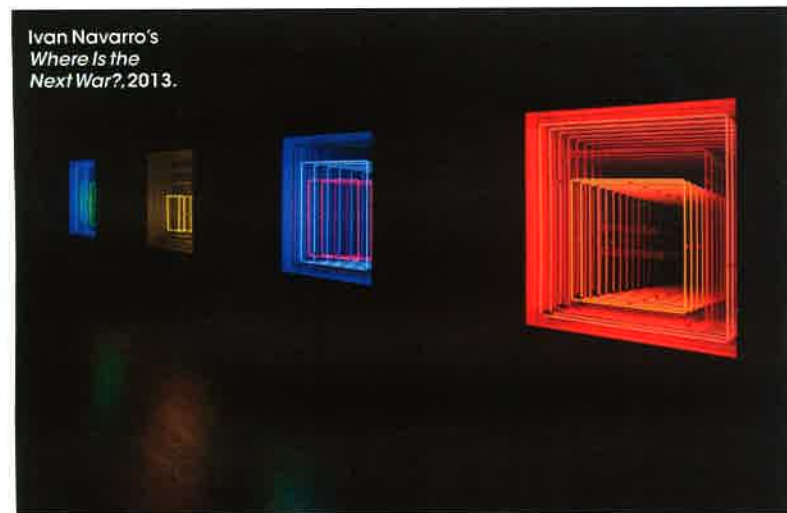

My desire is to strengthen our spaces in Paris, Hong Kong, and New York and to continue to support the artists through impressive projects in pertinent sites and museums.

What's your favorite place to eat near the gallery?

A pleasant place: the Café des Musées.

What emerging artist are you excited about?

Ivan Argote and John Henderson, who are the youngest artists at the gallery—less than 30 years old—and Pieter Vermeersch, too. I also dream of exhibiting Tauba Auerbach....

Ivan Navarro's
*Where is the

GALERIE DANIEL TEMPLON

Paris, France

FOCUS: Contemporary

ARTISTS: Anthony Caro, Larry Bell, Jim Dine, Tunga, Julião Sarmento

One of the oldest fixtures on Paris's contemporary art scene, the gallery was founded on Rue Bonaparte in 1966 by a 21-year-old Daniel Templon. Since then, the operation has moved to Rue Beaubourg and produced more than 400 exhibitions, including shows by seminal artists like Jean-Michel Basquiat, Dan Flavin, Keith Haring, Donald Judd, and Ellsworth Kelly. Impasse Beaubourg, a second venue dedicated to experimental installations, opened in 2007, proving the gallery's commitment to emerging talents, like Japanese installation artist Chiharu Shiota, in addition to established figures like Valerio Adami and Jim Dine.
